For this scavenger hunt, participants will walk around and meet new people. After a brief introduction with each other (state their name and region), they will ask each new person they meet one question based on a box. For example, for the first box, they would ask, "Have you been in FCCLA for 4-5 years?" If they have, they would sign their name in the box. Then, for a box that contains a star, the participants would have the person they meet give an answer that needs to be written down, along with their name. For example, for the second box, someone would ask, "Do you know the FCCLA tagline?" and the other person, if they know the answer, would state "The Ultimate Leadership Experience." The person asking the question would record it in the box and then have the other person sign their name. People should go back and forth. Two people must answer one question from each other.

The purpose of this icebreaker is for people to get up and meet new people.

Furthermore, they will be able to talk to each other and learn new things about one another.

Everyone will have 10 minutes to walk around and socialize, and once they have filled out all 20 of the boxes with either a name or an answer AND a name, they can come up to receive a prize (candy).

Team Building Activity

Three or more) Legged Race - Red Light Green Light

Each region will be a team. They will tie their legs together with one another with yarn. The people on the two ends will only have one of their legs tied, but those on the inside will have both legs tied, one with a person on their right, and one with the person on their left. The teams must try to walk together to the finish line where a person has their back turned. That person, turned around, will be shouting Green or Red. On green, the teams must try to walk as fast as they can towards the person. On red, the teams must stop while the person turns around to catch any team still moving forward. If they are caught still moving on red by the person, they must go back to the starting line. The winning team is the team that reaches the finish line (where the person is standing) first. They will receive a prize (candy bar).
